GENEVIEVE,

From the French of Hyppolyte Eticnnez.

Translated for the Commercial Journal.

And, in the intoxication of his delight, he seized the hand of the young girl, and covered it with tears and kisses. Just then, the carriage door opened, and Genevieve prepared to descend, but Pierre prevented her.

"One word more," said he; "it would now be both dangerous and useless to see each other again before starting; but within three days every thing will be ready, and I will give you notice of it."

The two lovers glanced at each other with a look full of tenderness, and Genevieve entered the house. As to Pierre, he started off with glad heart, and joyous visage, to obtain the co-operation of Mlle. de Laon, in dissolving their engagement.

At the same moment, Mlle. de Laon, scarcely recovered from the various emotions of the morning, was sitting sadly near her mother. In addition to the Duchess de Laon, the Countess de la Marche and the Marchioness de Crequi, were also in the saloon.—But instead of taking part in the conversation, the young girl sat silent and thoughtful, disdainfully twisting Genevieve's letter between her fingers. Of this letter, she was still ignorant of the answer, and yet this answer deeply interested her destiny. Had the Duke dared to reject her for a flower-girl? This was the question upon which her fate depended. But how solve it? how discover the answer? Clara had had an opportunity of doing this, and had let it escape her. In a few hours more, this fault would be irreparable, and up to this moment, no hope, no way of making amends for it, presented itself. Such were the bitter reflections which were secretly agitating the young girl, when the door suddenly opened, and master Patrolle entered.

"Ah!" said Mme. de Laon, "here is the Doctor!"

At this exclamation all the ladies turned round; and master Patrolle stopped short, with a disconcerted air, and threw a look of surprise about him.

"I hope that he will give us some intelligence," said Mme. de la Marche.

"Of what?" asked the Esculapian, timidly.

"Of our charming florist," added the Marchioness. "They say that she is sick. You, certainly, ought to be aware of it."

"Most certainly," said he; "she is under my care."

"I thought as much. Well, tell us, what is the matter with this lovely Genevieve!"

"Parbleu!" said the doctor, "the matter is, that, she is in love."

"In love?" said Clara, joining in the conversation; "and with whom?"

"Ah!" said the Doctor, turning to his questioner, "with whom? it is not easy to guess."

"That is not very astonishing," said Clara, disdainfully; "girls of her occupation cannot fail of having a great many lovers."

"Hum!" said the Doctor. "But, to tell the truth, I only know one avowed admirer, and his intentions are honorable."

"Do you know his name?" asked Clara, with anxiety.

"Yes," said the Doctor, recollecting what the soldier had confided to him; "his name is Julian—he is a drummer in the French Guards."

At this name, the countenance of the young girl brightened, then she immediately sank back into her sombre reveries.

"Apropos, Doctor," resumed Mme. de Laon, smiling, "see what is the matter with my daughter. For some days, Clara has been perfectly incomprehensible; may she not be affected with the same complaint as Genevieve?"

Clara trembled. The Doctor approached, and taking her hand, courteously said:

"Well, my dear young lady, what is the matter with you?"

Clara arose, and drawing close to the Doctor, said in a low voice—

"Sir, you can save my life—"

"Parbleu!" exclaimed the Doctor, recoiling a pace, "and how?"

"I have not seen the Duke of Edesse for the last four days; you are his friend; seek him, and return, and tell me what kind of a flower he wears at his button-hole."

The Doctor, greatly surprised, stood a moment thoughtful, and looked searchingly at the young girl.

"Well," said he, satisfied that he could not comprehend her object in this request, "since this can save your life, I must regard it as the necessary medicine—and, so,—I will do it."

At the same instant, a servant opened the door, and announced in a loud voice—

"My lord the Duke of Edesse."

Clara shuddered.

"Wait," said she, leaning heavily on the Doctor's arm, "wait."

Then with her eye fixed and motionless, she awaited the entrance of the young nobleman, a prey to the most horrible agonies.

At length Pierre entered; he wore a pink sprig at his button-hole. Clara saw it, and sank to the floor with a cry, so piercing, that not only her mother, her affianced and the two noble visitors, but also Mme. de Bruze and several servant-girls ran to her assistance. The Doctor, especially, was so deeply affected by it, that it was with difficulty that he recovered his self-possession.

At length, they bore Mlle. de Laon to bed, and things became somewhat more calm. The Countess, the Marchioness and Pierre remained in the saloon, with the hope of being enabled to carry home with them a more gratifying account of the young girl's health.

Soon the Doctor re-appeared. Clara had regained her senses, but was still extremely feeble; nevertheless, there was every reason to hope that her state was by no means critical. The Marchioness de Crequi offered the Countess a seat in her carriage; and the Doctor, having taken the Captain's arm, went out in company with him.

"My lord Duke," said he, looking resolutely in the face of his companion, "some strange things connected with you, have transpired during the last few days."

"What are they?" asked the Duke, with surprise.

"Do you know it is fortunate that my reputation is established? for, indeed, you give me more patients than I can cure."

"I do not understand you."

The doctor recounted his first interview with Genevieve, his conversation with Mlle. de Laon, and the suspicions which those singular coincidences had excited in him. At this recital, Pierre, drew his brows together; he could not imagine how Clara had learned the meaning of the flower which he wore.

"Well, really, resumed the doctor, do you, who have the key to the riddle, aid me a little, and tell me how it is.

"My dear doctor, replied Pierre, you see a man more embarrassed than yourself; permit me, awhile, to think over this singular circumstance; for, though you may lose your reputation by this matter, I am in danger of losing still more,——myself."

Saying these words, the duke of Edesse shook hands with master Patrolle, and left him, in order to give himself up more freely to his reflections. The doctor looked after him a moment; then turning suddenly on his heel, he said:

"Truly, the science of medicine has not yet reached perfection."

As we have already seen, Mme. de Laon remained with her daughter; she looked upon her with tender solicitude, and hazarded, from time to time, a few timid questions, but Clara could only reply to them in an inarticulate manner. Fearing to fatigue her, the duchess repressed her curiosity, kissed the pale brow of her daughter, and went out, leaving her in the care of Mme. de Bruze, who stood bathed in tears, at the pillow of the unhappy child.

As soon as her mother had gone out, Clara sat up, listened a moment, and hearing no noise in the adjoining room, handed her governess the paper, which despite her swooning, she had not ceased to hold concealed between her clenched fingers.

"Here, said she; read that letter."

Mme. de Bruze, astonished at this sudden return to health, and at the animated tone of her words, took the letter mechanically and glanced over it.

"Well? said she."

"Well! replied the young girl with incredible energy, he wore a pink——Just as I said to you!—yes, every thing is broken off between me and the duke of Edesse. I might have unmasked him to day, in the presence of my mother and our friends; but it is not time yet; I wish, first, to avenge myself!"

This exclamation terrified the governess.

"Calm yourself, my dear Clara, for heaven's sake." Clara made a menacing gesture.

"Listen, de Bruze; go to the barracks of the French Guards, and ask for M. Julian, a drummer in that regiment. You will know him, for he is the soldier who brought me to you, this morning.—You will tell him that a lady desires to speak with him in private, to-morrow evening, at six o'clock; if he consents, you will lead him to the rue Coquilliere, I will be there.

"Alas! alas! exclaimed the governess, clasping her hands, how will all this end?"

"Do it, my dear de Bruze, for God's sake."

However singular this request might appear, Mme. de Bruze was too devoted to Clara to refuse performing it; besides, she felt that it was made for serious and important purposes. On the following morning, before any one about the house was up, she took her hood and repaired on foot to the barracks.

By chance, the guard was, on that day, commanded by the brother of Genevieve. Baptiste was greatly surprised to see a lady enter the barracks at so early an hour, but, he was much more so, when she asked for Julian, the drummer. Nevertheless, he ordered one of the guard to conduct her to the armory, where Julian then was.

At the sight of Mme. de Bruze, whom he recognized Julian did not, for an instant, doubt that he had really touched the young girl's heart; for he recalled to mind, immediately the sweet words and gracious gesture with which Mlle. de Laon had thanked him, the evening before. The propositions, which the old lady made him, confirmed him in this opinion, and he only saw the commencement of an intrigue in the interview requested. This kind of adventures indeed, were common enough, at that period, to justify him in this mode of thinking.

Nevertheless, the drummer prudently dissembled his thoughts, promised to be discreet—and readily accepted all the conditions which were imposed upon him; then, having accompanied the governess to the barracks-gate he re-entered the court, about which he began to stride, back and forth, majestically.

He had been thus engaged for some time, thinking of his incredible adventure and fortune, when he perceived the sergeant who was looking at him, from a distance, with surprise. Julian, faithful to his promise, bit his tongue sharply, and immediately wheeled round. Still the indiscretion was tempting; for if Julian never had doubted the power of his good looks, neither had his good looks ever achieved such a conquest. Soon, he could no longer restrain himself; he stopped, and winking cunningly, beckoned for the sergeant to approach. The sergeant did not require a second invitation.

'Baptiste," said Julian, "you are off of duty at noon?"

"Yes," said the sergeant.

"Well, if you are willing, we will go and breakfast together at the Pine-apple; I have something to tell you. But," continued he, placing his fingers on his lips, "keep dark!"

Julian raised his arm to heaven with a solemn air.

At noon precisely, the two friends went, arm in arm to the Pine-apple. This was a celebrated coffee house, in the neighborhood of Saint Bernard's gate, near the place where the Wine Market now stands. The debauchees of the period, and consequently, the usurers, were accustomed to go there on their speculations, under the more moral pretext of eating fish, as the house was famed for the excellent manner in which that article was served up there.

During the whole walk, Julian kept perfectly silent and with head hanging down, and smiling countenance he went on licking his lips, like a man entirely abandoned in some delightful dream. Baptists, completely puzzled by all these grimaces, silently glanced at his companion, and every now and then, threw a scrutinizing gaze upon him; but he did not even dare to break the silence, fearing doubtless, that he might prevent, by an indiscreet question, the revelations which had been promised him.

When arrived at the Pine-apple, there were already a great many persons in the saloons; and the two soldiers seated themselves at a table in one corner.

Breakfast having been served up, Julian made a signal to the waiter to withdraw, then bringing his face near to that of his friend, he looked so long and so earnestly into his eyes, that this last began to lose all patience.

"Baptiste," at length commenced the drummer in a low voice, I am about to perjure myself for your sake; but, you are my friend, and I,feel that I must open my heart entirely to you. Listen; but remember, that upon the slightest indiscretion I will have you put in the Bastile."

This threat made Baptiste leap on his chair; he looked earnestly at his friend, and seeing that he spoke seriously concluded that he was crazy.

"In the Bastile?" said he.

"Neither more nor less. If on the contrary, you are discreet, well! then, my boy, perhaps we may be able to do something for you."

Baptiste was on the point of flying into a passion; but he contained himself

"Well, come, go on!" exclaimed he in a tone of inexpressible resignation, "come, come, go on, I am listening."

"Hist! be still, poor devil!" said Julian, looking mysteriously around him.

Baptiste was leaning with his head on his hands, and his eyes shut, fully determined to suffer the mystification to the end.

"Baptiste," continued Julian, "true I am not a sergeant; I am not the captain's friend, like you; but I do not at all envy you; every body here below has his small share of good luck; and, well do you know, that you do not get along well with the women.

This was too much; Baptiste was touched at his most sensible point. He suddenly raised his head.

"And you!" cried he fiercely.

"Oh!—with me!—it is quite different."

Baptiste let a disdainful laugh escape him, and then resumed his former position with dignity.

"I do not want to hurt your feelings in saying so." Baptiste remained silent and motionless.

"But, never mind!" resumed the drummer; now! frankly, have you ever had an assignation with a duchess?"

Baptiste shrugged his shoulders.

"No! Well!—I have one this evening. What do you say now!"

At this unexpected disclosure, Baptiste started as if he had been touched with a red hot iron.

"You?" said he.

"Yes,—me!"

"You lie!"

"Thunder and lightning!" cried the drummer, striking the table violently with his tankard.

Then suddenly calming himself:

The Future.

The Baltimore American, under the head "Progressive Democracy" contains an extract from the National Intelligencer, which speaks "of the changes which have taken place within the last twenty years in the tone, temper and spirit characteristic of the administration of our public affairs."

The Intelligencer expresses deep regret at the unscrupulous party practices, which have marked the conduct of dominant demagogues, and the insensate visions of boundless dominion, which they have placed before the people—visions of blessing the subjugated earth, by the sway of persons who are pulling their own government to pieces, and undermining our national defences and resources. "We turn our eyes, (says the Intelligencer) only with dismay upon the spectacle of public affairs, and endeavor in vain to repel from our hearts, impressions the most melancholy."

There is a strain of tender and patriotic solicitude and virtuous feeling in the remarks of the Intelligencer, which must recommend them to the heart of every honest-minded reader. That those changes have occurred, no one can deny: that they indicate immensely greater changes and transitions in the future, must be evident; for effects partake of the nature of their cause, and the law of progress binds events together as links in a chain: but yet we are more disposed to accord in opinion, with the Baltimore American, and to believe that a happy chrystalization will succeed the effervescence and confusion, which are now presented in the appearance of public affairs

We will be much helped in understanding the nature of the transitions which are coming upon our country, and indeed, upon the whole world, by considering the character of the changes which have already been introduced, and which are fact hastening on and impelling other new conditions.

There is now a freedom, if not a licentiousness of inquiry spreading itself like a whirlwind in all nations, and among all classes and occupations of men. Nothing is too sacred, nor too ancient to be brought to the bar of free-inquiry, and to be interrogated and cross-examined in the most bold and searching manner, and often with very little courtesy, as to its true name, attributes utility, authenticity and right to have existence.

Perhaps, after all, we did wrong to call the tribunal, before which these investigations are made, the bar of free-inquiry; for not unfrequently the examinations before it, are conducted in a manner, displaying very little true freedom and less magnanimity. But whether it is a true or a false inquiry, it is a fact, that the public mind is immensely more inquiring and active in extended observations and judgments than it used to be; and this trait or tendency of the age, is still developing itself with an energy and boldness fast increasing.

One cause for this freedom of inquiry is the advancement in knowledge of the great masses of the people, induced not only by temperance societies, but by improvements in the making of paper and in printing presses, by which knowledge is thrown out in the cheapest form, and circulated in all directions. The facilities of transportation, too, by rail-ways, canals, and steamers, and the readiness of distant communications by mail routes have helped to bring the minds, and in many instances the persons of vast multitudes together, and to cause thought and feeling to spread over remote regions, with the speed of electricity. It is not wonderful, therefore, that immense changes, should have occurred in the popular feelings and actions within the last twenty years. That an improvement has not taken place in integrity and benevolence, equal to the advancement which has been witnessed in intelligence and information, is a cause for deep regret, and cannot fail to excite serious apprehensions in a patriotic bosom; but what else could have been expected from the immoral tendency, which has too often marked the literature, with which our country has been inundated?

We believe, however, that a better state of things will be ushered in. The lower sentiments and instincts of the mind, have been first called into action; but these will be succeeded by nobler and higher motives. Already the age presents innumerable instances of benevolent and religious men, who feel it to be both their duty and their pleasure, to devote themselves to the great work of a practical and universal reform, by bringing men to a spirit of peaceful unity and harmony. An impulse has been felt by the Churches, and the whole world, is moving onward. Mankind, indeed, may come into terrible and fearful collisions, and the worst apprehensions of despouding persons, may, for a time, be realized. But we hope better things. And sure we are that the bringing of the world together by knowledge and intercourse, by the press, and the steamer, the railway, the canal and electro-magnetic telegraphs, and many other modes of communication and transmission of thought, must exalt and ennoble all minds, and cement them in unity.

A very bright future, we believe, is before mankind.

The editor of the Journal is scarcely able to contain his joy in being selected with the Post to publish the city ordinances. He almost expresses fears that he cannot bear the honor with becoming modesty. The log was said to have some such notion, when it was made king of the frogs. To this announcement of the fact, he appends the following in a note.

It was Dr. Kerr who moved in Councils a resolution giving the printing to a paper of each party, Democratic and Whig. He very properly practises on his own rule.

When it is recollected that the editor of the Journal was but lately in full communion with the locofoco Tyler party, and at the last general election voted the locofoco ticket for two of the most important offices against the Whigs, the liberality of the Mayor, may be placed in less bounds.—May not the Mayor now be only rewarding services at a more recent election.—American

The above is from the American, of course.—We are exceedingly mortified by the tone of our excellent friend, the editor of that paper. We persuaded ourself, when our appointment as city printer was made known, that the editor of the American would rejoice with us. We counted upon his long tried attachment to our person; but, alas! Snarley snaps and we were mistaken.

Well! we do him large justice, and copy his article entire, as we usually do with him. His huge insinuations about our being bought with a price, would be of none effect if confined to the narrow compass of his little round of readers, so we give it the benefit of the Journal's larger circulation.

Finally, the editor of the American is very severe, and we are in deep distress thereat. This is one of the thousand difficulties that always environ greatness. Just as we advance in official dignity, envy and jealousy are armed against us. We could almost wish, while our honors are yet in the bud, that we were nothing but a mere individual.

Is there no way of conciliating the editor of the American?

The One Hour Rule.

The Alexandria Gazette congratulates its hearers on the existence of the 'one hour rule' in the House of Representatives. The editor says:

Suppose for a moment, that there was no such a rule in existence, now that the Oregon question is under debate! What quantities of froth—what hours of bombast—what days of insane stuff!—Now we have froth, and bombast, and insanity, occasionally, it is true; that cannot be helped—but it is in jests, sports, one hour at a time,—there is a pause, some intermission, some variety—it does not pour out in one weak, washy, everlasting flood!

Tax on Coal.

The following resolution in the House, at Harrisburgh, was submitted by Mr. Hill, of Montgomery:

"Resolved, That the Committee of Ways and Means be instructed to inquire into the expediency of laying a tax of ten cents per ton on Anthracite coal, and four mills on every bushel of Bituminous coal taken from the coal mines of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or such other sum as policy may dictate to said Committee.

Mr. Magehan objected to the adoption of any resolution of this kind at a time when the great interests of Pennsylvania were in jeopardy in another quarter.

Mr. Hill of Montgomery, said that the resolution was one merely of inquiry, and as it was apparent that some additional revenue would be needed to sustain the credit of the State, he thought this a fair and proper subject of inquiry.

Mr. Piollet moved to strike out the sums specified in the resolution, so as to make the inquiry merely go the expediency of levying a tax on the article of coal. The question being taken, the amendment was agreed to."

In this shape the resolution became the subject of a brief but animated debate; until finally Mr. Burrell moved "to strike out all after the word "resolved," and insert the following: "That the Report of the State Treasurer be referred to the Committee of Ways and Means, with instructions to report upon the suggestions contained therein for increasing the revenue and reducing the debt of the Commonwealth." This amendment was agreed to, and the resolution as amended was adopted.

Upon this subject of a tax on coal, we will mention, that when George Wolf was Governor of this Commenwealth, in one of his Messages, he brought before the Legislature the propriety of levying a tax on coal, with a view to create a fund to relieve the State from the sums expended in internal improvement. The arguments of the friends of the measure, then, we believe were of this character: that as the coal lands in the interior of the State, along the line of the public works, were almost without value, until such time as they could be reached by the public improvements, and then were readily sold, and became the objects of speculation, it was right that they should contribute a larger sum than the low assessments upon them, at that period, demanded.

It was therefore proposed, as a financial measure, sanctioned by justice and made necessary by the public interests, that a tax should be levied upon Coal, in such a manner that the expense of the State improvements, might, in a mere equitable manner than was then the case, be defrayed by the articles, which were most benefitted. But the measure was highly unpopular, not only in the coal regions, to which an opening was made by the public works, but elsewhere in the State; and the Governor and his friends very soon abandoned the attempt.

It was thought to be a tax upon labor, and no more just than a tax upon corn and hay. The lands in the interior coal regions were, before the operation of the public works, of very little or no value; but, afterwards, the assessments upon them, became, or should have been in proportion to their increased value. If any deficiency yet exists in their valuations, it should be corrected; and this this point, should early receive the attention of the Legislature.

The members at Harrisburg, are unquestionably correct, who now oppose the tax on coal, on the ground that the agitation by a Pennsylvania Legislature, of a resolution to impose such a tax, might induce Congress to reduce the protective duty on the importation of the foreign article. We cannot expect that Congress, swayed by a Polk majority, would continue a duty on the importation of a eign coal, when a Pennsylvania Legislature creates an excise on the home supply. The sooner, therefore, the proposal is definitively rejected or disavowed at Harrisburg, the better.

Monument from Hindoos to a Christian.

Major Rogers, a gallant English officer, and a man of active benevolence, died last autumn in the island of Ceylon. This circumstance brought forth a remarkable trait in the native character. It is customary among the natives, on the death of any great or good man among themselves, to erect a Budhist temple to his memory, in order to connect his name with suitable associations. Following out this custom, and having a high regard for Major Rogers, they met together, and knowing him to have been a Christian, they proposed, through their Chief, the erection of a Christian temple to his memory. Columbo is the capital of the island, and the Observer of that place, of the 16th of September, says, "the conduct of the natives on this occasion is an unanswerable refutation of the charge so frequently and unjustly brought against them, that they are incapable of attachment and gratitude to benefactors. We are assured that when intelligence of his death reached Badula, many natives were seen in the bazaar shedding tears.

Plain Talk.

The Washington Journal has the following laconic remark.

INFIDELITY OF THE CLERGY.—Had the ministers of the Gospel adhered with fidelity to the doctrines of the Master they profess to follow, the world would not now hear of a prospect of war between two civilized and christianized nations.

A Narrow Escape from the Law.

A man was put upon trial yesterday afternoon in the Court of Quarter Sessions, charged with the larceny of a breastpin. Witnesses were examined pro and con., the prosecuting attorney made a lengthy argument against the prisoner, and the counsel for the latter defended him with zeal and ability, the judge then charged the jury, and the bill submitted to them, when lo! the foreman discovered on the back of the indictment an endorsement of a startling character, contained in mystical language not very flattering to the writer. This was the word, "Ignoramus," which being interpreted, means that the writer is a dolt and "don't know nothing," but in legal parlance signifies that the Grand Jury have decided against the bill, because they know no good reason why the defendant ought to be tried for the offence with which it charges him. The discovery of this endorsement was immediately made known to the "bench and bar" who were not a little surprised to find that they had expended so much forensic learning and eloquence upon a bad bill, and the defendant was consequently upon his lucky escape, through the excellence of the foreman's eye-sight. What a strange predicament all parties would have been placed in if the defendant had been convicted.—Phil. Public Ledger.

Our Book Table.

Mr. J. W. Cook has just received a large addition to his supply of books and magazines. We find on our table a rich offering of tribute to the printer:

No. 47, of HARPER'S NEW ILLUSTRATED AND Pictorial Bible. This splendid work nearly approaches completion, and the bible will certainly surpass every thing that has preceded, of its kind.

THE CITIZEN OF PRAGUE, Translated by Mary Howitt, being No. 70, of Harper's Library of select novels. While we cannot, of our own judgment decide upon the merits of this book, not having read it, we venture to assert that it must be of unusual interest and excellence, because the translator speaks of it in a very brief preface as "a valuable work" and elsewhere she adds "the beautiful "and elevated spirit which breaths through the "whole work and animates its leading characters, "makes this splendid romance an honour to human "nature,"

Mary Howitt has done enough for literature to be entitled to rank as an authority, and we would take this book on her endorsement to be of a high order.

"The Theatrical Apprenticeship, and Anecdotal Recollections of Sol Smith, Esq., Comedian, Lawyer etc. With original designs by Darley. Vol. I of Carey & Hart's Library of Humorous American Works." This is an amusing volume, as we gather from a glance, and the illustrations are admirably executed.

Cook has also received Graham's magazine for February, a capital number, and Mrs. Stephens' Ladies' National Magazine for the same month.

☞ We take the following from the Tribune. The invention is esteemed, by those who have witnessed its operation, as a highly ingenious and economical improvement. We invite the attention of our citizens generally to the description below:

IMPROVED MODE OF WARMING DWELLINGS.—The improvements in the mode of warming dwelling houses, which have been introduced into the city of New York, within the last two years, have effected almost an entire revolution in this department of our domestic arrangements. Mr. E. L. Miller, of Brooklyn, was the first to introduce among us the present admirable system of air furnaces. He has recently, however, introduced into his own house, 39 Clark street, an arrangement for warming by air radiated from water heated surfaces only: in other words, a hot water furnace of an entirely new construction. The apparatus is placed in the lower basement of the house, occupies no more space than an ordinary hot air furnace, and distributes the heat through the house in the usual way of the common furnace; but the effect of the quantity of fuel under ignition, and the character of the heat, are truly astonishing and delightful. The combustion of the fuel is regulated with the greatest precision by means of a self-acting damper which he has introduced, and which is worked by the expansion of water and air combined, so as to consume any desirable quantity of coal, from 50 to 100 lbs. in the twenty-four hours, according to the state of the weather. The space we saw warmed to the temperature of 68 or 70 degrees, comprises two very large four story houses, fifty-four feet front by fifty feet deep, containing about thirty rooms. The heat may be carried to any desirable distance, say from one to two hundred feet from the furnace-chamber, and its capacity for heating may be proportioned to buildings of any size, while the peculiar purity and salubrity of the atmosphere, produced by this mode of heating, renders it particularly desirable for dwelling houses, apartments for the sick, conservatories, &c., &c.

Mr. M. has erected his furnace, not only for the purpose of warming his house, but for exhibiting its operation, which he will be most happy to do to any gentleman who may wish to render his own house more than comfortable, in the most effectual and economical manner.

☞ The library of Judge Garland, which was seized for rent, in New Orleans, was sold for nine hundred and fifty dollars.

PITTSBURGH POLICE.

MAYOR'S OFFICE,
Pittsburgh, Jan. 20, 1846

Seven "cases" brought up by the officers. One for larceny, who was committed. The remainder for vagrancy; two of whom paid their fines, and were discharged; one sent to the hill for five days; one for twenty-four hours; and one for fifty days We are sorry to say that two of those sent up for vagrancy were females.

From this return it would appear that business is on the increase. Probably the loafing public are anxious to test the character and susceptibilities of the new Mayor.

Died.

At Quincy, Illinois, on the 4th inst. of protracted illness, Captain J. A. PHILLIPS, formerly of the U. S. Navy.

Stabbing.

The Louisville Journal of the 15th says: A most disgraceful row occurred about 9 o'clock last night at a notorious house on Market street, near Twelfth between four young men, named Charles O'Strandler, Charles Schwanck, Jno. Fagherty, and Joseph ——, a Frenchman, and wagon maker, in which O'Straudler was stabbed in the side and badly wounded. His physician considers his recovery doubtful. O'Strandler, we understand states that Schwanck inflicted the wound. All it seems, were intoxicated. The watchmen promptly arrested all three of the participators.

☞ BOOK AND JOB PRINTING.- There is connected with the Commercial Journal, a complete Job Printing Office, where we will be happy to execute all orders of our friends for Book, Bill and Card work, in all varieties, and at low prices. ☞ COSTIVENESS, CHOLIC AND INDIGESTION, have long baffled the physician's skill. A medicine however, has been discovered, and is now offered to the world, which is a quick and perfect cure for them, to which nearly every respectable practitioner in New York will bear willing testimony, as they have abandoned all other remedies for its use. The remedy spoken of is Chickener's Sugar Coated Vegetable Pills. A medicine which is as palateable as sugar plumbs, never gripes or nauseates in the slightest degree, and yet is the most searching and positive purgative preparation ever discovered. Such is the excellence of Clickener's Sugar Coated Vegetable Pills, that the proprietor warrants a cure if they are taken according to directions, and binds himself to return the money if the purchaser is not fully pleased with them. The great excitement which their appearance has produced is not a false one, but is erected on the strong foundation of truth, and will never pass away, for so long as costiveness, cholic and indigestion remain attendant in the human race, so long will their only positive remedy continue to be popular. jan 21-ly

To the Dyspeptic!

THE subscriber would call the attention of persons who may be suffering with Dyspepsia, to Thompson's Tonic and Anti-Dyspeptic Purgative Pills. They are, without exception, the best article ever offered to the public for the unmerited cure of that disease. Try them once, and you will be sure to recommend them to all who may be afflicted. ☞ DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY—This celebrated remedy is a compound balsamic preparation of the Wild Cherry and Moss of Iceland, combined by a new chemical process with the Extract of Pine. So salutary have been its effects in all cases when administered for coughs, asthma, consumption, or any disease of the lungs, that many of the most distinguished physicians have approved and recommended it, and openly acknowledged it to be the most valuable medicine discovered. It is truly a valuable medicine, and is effecting an immense amount of good in the relief of suffering humanity. jan 19

☞ A WORD to those that are consumptive. It is a known and decided fact that consumption of the lungs leads to a speedy death, unless there are some proper medicines used to arrest the further progress of the disease. Have you not witnessed the departure of many of your intimate friends, hastened thither by the strong hand of of this disease? Then why not be alarmed for the safety of your own health, and endeavor to secure a longer lease upon this world? Have you not been prevailed upon, time after time, to use Dr. Duncan's Expectorant Remedy, which is prepared expressly for the removal of diseases of the Lungs and Bronchial tubes. A few bottles of this medicine at the first attack, always prevents the disease from settling upon the Lungs.

A fresh supply of Dr. Duncan's Expectorant Remedy, for Consumption, is just received by the agent

To the Public.

THE undersigned having been appointed for this region sole Agent for procuring subscribers to a most invaluable monthly magazine, called The Literary Emporium. In fact, it is a compendium of religious, literary and philosophical knowledge, published by J. K. WELLMAN, N. York. Each half year comprises a volume. We have the two volumes of last year, elegantly bound in one, comprising near four hundred pages, which gives us a most perfect knowledge of the work. The contributors numerous; and the best moral writers of the day. The number commencing the 3d series, January 1st, 1846, we have received, embellished with a splendid steel plate, and a beautiful painted flower. Each successive number will, if possible, eclipse its predecessor.

The subscription price for one year, if paid in advance, $1.00, or 10 cents per number, when delivered monthly.

Call at the new Literary Emporium, Smithfield street, 2d door from second. jan 9-1y C. E. MINER.

From the Baltimore American.

Mexico.

The intelligence from Mexico, published below, shows the fact that the expected revolutionary movements against the government of President Herrera had commenced, with every prospect of a successful and speedy termination. It will be seen that Gen. Paredes was at the head of the movement. The overthrow of the Peace party and the ascendancy of the War faction in Mexico place the Mission of the American Minister, Mr. Slidell, in a position directly the reverse of that which it originally occupied. The Washington "Union," in publishing the news, precedes it with the annexed remarks:

If the following intelligence be correct, then, indeed, the "New Orleans Delta" of the 9th inst., probably fore-shadows the result of the mission, and course which we must pursue. "If Paredes has succeeded, (says the Delta,) the mission of Mr. Slidell will, of course, be unsuccessful, and the two countries will remain in a state of doubtful hostilities, which it will be the duty of our government to bring to an immediate termination.

The movement of Paredes turned directly upon the question of peace or war with the United States, or, in other words, the avowed reason for proceeding against the administration of Herrera was its alleged willingness to negotiate with the United States for Texas and the Californias.

In this view of the case, it is altogether probable that decisive measures on the part of our government will be adopted to bring to a speedy, definite settlement, all difficulties with Mexico.

☞ The Washington Union of Saturday evening, received since the above was put in type, says:—We understand that these statements are substantially confirmed by the official accounts—and then adds:—

Rumor has gone forth in the streets of Washington to-day, which the accounts do not confirm, viz: that Mexico has declared war against the United States. War may ensue, but it has not yet been declared, as far as we are advised. Mexico may be mad enough to resort to this extremity, or to reject all our demands for justice, as they will probably be urged by Mr Slidell. The result of such a course on her part may compel us to resort to more decisive measures for obtaining justice.

The Union refers in the same article to the rumor mentioned by our Washington correspondent, that news had been received in Washington from Mexico that negotiations are going on between the Mexican and French governments for placing a constitutional king upon the throne of Mexico, and remarks—

We will not undertake to say there is no truth in this rumor, and which is not altogether new; but certain it is, that we are not advised of there being any foundation for it in the official despatches.—Mexico is apparently in a state of transition; and it becomes the United States to keep watch and ward over her revolutions, as well as the maintenance of our own rights.

Late and Important from Mexico.

Advices from Tampico to the 1st instant have been brought to New Orleans by the Mexican schooner Joaquina. The Picayune of the 9th says that the rumors which have been for some weeks in circulation that Gen. Paredes had at last declared against the Government, appear at length likely to be verified by the course he is pursuing. A revolution is now on foot, or has already been consummated.

The revolution in progress commenced with the "Army of Reserve," statioped at San Luis Potosi. The agitation and ferment preliminary to an outbreak probably gave occasion to the rumor which was in circulation in Vera Cruz on the 1st December, when the British steamer left for Havana. It was a fortnight after, that things reached a crisis. On the 14th of December the Commandant General of the Department, De Manuel Romero, invited to his residence, at San Luis Potosi, the superior and other officers of the Army of Reserve, as well as of the garrison of the department.—Being there assembled, Gen. Romero read to them a manifesto, prepared for the occasion, in which the duties of the armed force of the country are well pointed out, but grave political evils are assigned to excuse themselves for the act they are about to commit.

The manifesto alleges that the existing Administration, from which a year since all had hoped so well, had conducted the Government to the brink of a precipice: that it had established the most preposterous theories upon which to administer internal affairs, that it sought to get rid of a war, necessary and glorious in itself, by concessions injurious to the national dignity, and which were the sole barrier to the ambitious designs of a nation as powerful as it was perfidious; that it had proposed a law of which the atrocity was without example, by which to arm the vile and ignorant, those having the least stake in the country, and thus to find a substitute for the army which opposed its views that it had repeatedly thwarted the purpose of the army to move upon Texas, and at the same time allowed the army to be vilified for its inaction by official journals; endeavoring to arrange for the loss of the integrity of the Republic that it had reduced the country almost to a state of anarchy, in the midst of which it existed without revenue, without power, and almost without will: and considering that these evils demanded an immediate remedy, and that the Administration confessed its total incompetency and powerlessness—considering that it had lost all respectability so necessary to a Government, and had allowed a Plenipotentiary of the United States to set foot in the country and reside in the capital with a view to bargain for the independence and nationality of the country, which have been so many sacrifices—considering all these, and other grievances which we have not even time to mention, the manifesto then proposes for the consideration of the Junta ten propositions, the two first of which are as follows:

"1st. The Army supports with arms the protest which the nation makes against every future act of the existing Administration, and from this day forth will hold such act void and of no effect.

"2d. The present Chambers of Congress and of the Executive, not being able to continue their functions, from this time their authority over the army ceases."

We have not aimed to give the preamble in all its verbose and ponderous details, but infer from it that the propositions are sought to be fortified mainly by the total incapacity of the existing Administration, and its readiness to negotiate with the United States for Texas and the Californias.

The solemn act of the Army of Reserve was fully approved of by the Governor and Assembly of the department of San Luis Potosi, on the 14th of December. A committee of General officers immediately communicated the above act to Gen. Paredes, and there was no doubt that he would accede to the request made of him.

On the 20th of December the officers stationed at Tampico held a meeting and formally approved, and adopted as their own, in every respect, the proceedings of the army at San Luis Potosi. On the 21st ult. Gen. Garrodi, Commandant General of the Department of Tampico, addressed a circular to the citizens of the Department and another to the troops, in which he announces to them what has been done, and calls upon them to stand by Gen. Paredes, who alone can sustain the honor of the nation.

A letter received at New Orleans from Tampico, dated Dec. 23, states that Paredes had actually commenced his march on the city of Mexico, at the head of 6000 men. The writer of the letter is of opinion that Paredes will refuse to treat with Mr. Slidell, and "probably declare a paper war and send him away." The writer further says that he looks upon actual war as idle talk—in his own words "as all humbug."

Foreign Paupers.

By the following extract from the American Citizen, published at Cincinnati, quoting from the St. Louis Daily American, it will be seen that our Country is over-run by Paupers imported from abroad, who, no doubt, bring with them the vices and ignorance common to the paupers of Europe.

EIGHTEEN THOUSAND.—A portion of the eighteen thousand foreign emigrants, announced a few days ago, as bound for the West, has already arrived. One, or more of them, was admitted into the Hospital yesterday. A gentleman informs us, that yesterday his attention was directed to a small room where the parents and five children, just arrived, were merely breathing—the children crying with hunger—and not a semblance of any thing in the house to eat. He purchased some things for them, which gave them relief for the time being.—St. Louis Daily American.

We understand a number of the emigrants who arrived here on Sunday, applied to the Township Trustees for relief, immediately on their arrival. And many of them went to the Hospital.

Valuable Real Estate for Sale.

THE undersigned will dispose of the following valuable Real Estate, viz:—

THIRTY ACRES OF GROUND, having an extensive front on the South bank of the Monongahela, (our principal business river where all the steamers land) and where the business part of the City is done,) being the West end of the Borough of Birmingham, laid out into 220 lots of 24 by 100 feet, for Residences, and 90 by 390 feet for Manufactories fronting on 50 feet streets, and extending back to 20 feet alleys.

TEN ACRES similarly situated and laid out, adjoining the East end of Birmingham.

THIRTY ACRES OF COAL HILL LOTS, running from near the Bridge toward Birmingham, fronting on the 60 Yards on the Monongahela River.

These are well known as the most advantageous locations about Pittsburgh, or in the world, for Manufacturing, inexhaustible mines of Coal of the richest and best quality, at hand, and furnished much cheaper than any other place about the City, and being nearly opposite the City Steamboat landing.

For Residences, also, there are no more beautiful, healthy, and convenient locations for those engaged in business in the City; but a few minutes ride or walk from the beautiful new Wire Suspension Bridge; some of the sites commanding fine views of the two Cities, three rivers and surrounding country.

We would prefer to selling that Capitalists would join us in the erection of manufactories and other improvements. There is a stratum of Coal beneath the surface of 12 to 15 feet in thickness. A large body of the ground is above the common water level, and valuable for making Brick. It being a portion of an undivided estate for the past forty years, has thus been kept out of the market. Could the yearly applications to purchase have been accepted, many would ere this have been sold and comfortably built up. It will be sold at less than other property as near the City in other directions, (and we particularly invite those interested to compare the prices,) notwithstanding its superior advantages, and must rapidly increase in value, beyond a doubt, for not only does it possess its great resources and advantageous location, presenting an object of the most certain and lucrative investment, for manufacturing the most advantageous, and for residences the most desirable, all of which is more fully set forth and described, as well as other general information in regard to it and our City, in a pamphlet issued by us, and to be had of Booksellers in this and Eastern cities. If not disposed of previously, it will be sold either in whole or in part at either one of the plots, on Monday, the 25th day of May next, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Terms moderate.

A Stubborn Fact in Mesmerism!

Statement of Mrs. Spence.

☞ I had been suffering for about five weeks from what is termed the "Milk Leg," and during that time experienced much pain, and was considered in a very low and critical situation. It had been lanced twice by the attending physician, causing me great pain, and affording me no improvement or relief. Before it was to be lanced for the third time, and with the hope of mitigating the agony of that operation, I was induced by a friend to submit myself to be magnetized previous to the application of the lancet. For this purpose, Mr. P. A. Westervelt visited me, and mesmerized me. After the first essay, I was so much relieved as to be able to enjoy a good sleep, which I had not previously done for a long time. By the repetition of the manipulations, I became so much relieved from pain, that I concluded not to undergo a third surgical operation, and persisted in the mesmeric treatment until the disease dissipated itself by a copious discharge, through the previously lanced places, resulting in a perfect cure. It is proper to say that after the first application of mesmerism, I discontinued the use of medicine altogether, and trusted alone to the manipulations. At the time the mesmeric treatment was commenced, I was unable to stand or even to change my position in bed, without much suffering. In three weeks after the commencement of this treatment, I was able to walk about the streets without difficulty. M. E. SPENCE.

City of Pittsburgh, ss.

Before me, an Alderman in and for said city, personally came M. E. Spence, who being duly affirmed, sayeth: that the facts set forth in the foregoing statement is just and true to the best of her knowledge, and belief. M. E. SPENCE.

Affirmed and subscribed, this 27th day of October, 1845. R. MORROW.

☞ The public are here presented with a regularly authenticated testimonial of the cure of a disease, which has in numerous instances, baffled the skill of the medical faculty, and entailed helplessness and suffering on its unhappy subjects; a cure too, be it remembered, whose prominent feature is, by its action in all cases, to subdue pain—never to produce it. I am in possession of certificates from individuals who have been restored to health under my hands, from indisposition of many years standing. These testimonials will be made public in due time, and in the mean while may be seen at my residence. Among the disorders cured, may be mentioned—Epilepsy, Flow of the Blood to the Head, Rheumatism, Headache, Toothache, Nervous Tremblings, &c.

Explosion of Steam Boilers.

EVANS' ALLOY SAFETY GUARD, and Evans' Metallic Expansion Safety Guard.—The subscriber respectfully informs the public that he has procured a Patent for his Metallic Expansion Safety Guard, and is now prepared to manufacture the same, as well as his well known Alloy Safety Guard, upon which he has also made an improvement.

Steam Boat owners and others can now make a choice of either of the two inventions, and procure them from the original inventor, without the expense or danger of litigation, which would certainly follow upon any infringement of his patents. He would respectfully invite the public to call at his office, and examine his inventions, which he will cheerfully explain by working models.

Thankful for past favors, he flatters himself that his long and unremitted exertions to the subject of preventing explosions will ensure him a continuance of public patronage.
C. EVANS.

FOR SAFETY

Travelers should select a Boat provided with Evans' Safety Guards, for preventing explosions of steam boilers. It would be well for the travelling community to bear in mind that their security depends entirely upon their own encouragement of boats that have or may be at the expense of procuring the above apparatus. And that every individual making such selection is contributing towards a general introduction of an invention admitted by all men who understand the principles of the Steam Engine, to be a sure preventative against those dreadful disasters. This invention has been applied to upwards of 100 steamers, and travelers are cautioned against being deceived by men representing their boats as having Safety Guards, when they are not so secured against explosions. Examine the show bills and advertisements for correct information.

Thorn's Yeast Powders.

FOR arising buckwheat, flannel and other cakes.—These Powders are an admirable substitute for yeast, in making all kinds of batter cakes and bread, that do not require much kneading, and have the advantage over that article in making the latter perfectly light and ready for baking the instant they are mixed. Buckwheat and other cakes, when made with these powders, are less likely to disagree with the stomach than those made with yeast, are entirely free from any bitter or unpleasant taste; and as it requires but a few minutes to prepare for baking, the possibility of ever having them sour is avoided. They are used by many respectable families and physicians in the city, and highly approved of. I theref

THE subscriber respectfully announces to his former patrons and the public generally, that he has completed his establishment for gymnastic exercises, and will open his books for the reception of subscribers on Monday next. He has prepared his apparatus for various exercises, on the most approved plan, and after consultation with several of the most distinguished physicians in the city, so that he is confident that no establishment in the country is better prepared for those exercises of the muscles which are calculated to strengthen the limbs, expand the chest, promote the free circulation of the blood, and to improve the health generally. Establishments of this kind are recommended by the best physicians of Philadelphia, as well as of this city, especially to persons of sedantary habits. Those who wish to subscribe, are recommended to commence with the beginning of the year.
